Supplementary Features in the OER Project's World History Project AP

The following ideas show how the content in the AP® World History: Modern coursebook from AMSCO® can be enriched with features and expanded coverage in the OER Project's World History Project AP text.

Video Enrichment

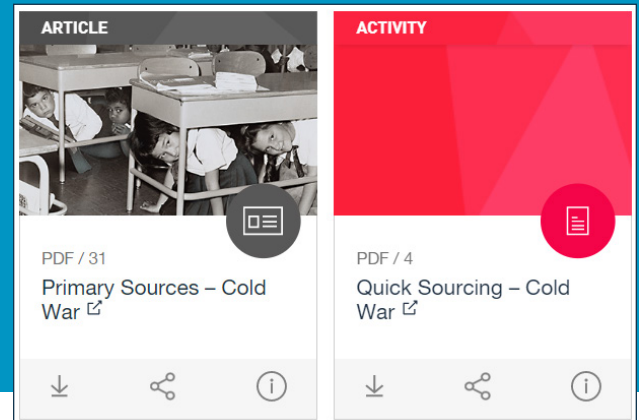

Videos are embedded in all of the chapters to provide context and enhance the learning experience.

Supplementary Features

Adds color to the basic narrative.

- Primary Source Articles. Primary sources provide an in-depth look into historical events.
- Skill-Building Activities. Focused activities to practice historical reasoning processes, writing, close reading, and other skills.

Expanded Coverage

The OER Project text provides expanded coverage of certain topics. Every teacher will decide how much coverage is possible within time constraints and with knowledge of the essential knowledge articulated in the Course and Exam Description. But if a teacher would wish to supplement the content about the Allied military successes during World War II, for example, covered in AMSCO on pages 515–516, the World History Project AP provides an article written by historian Trevor Getz and a video narrated by author John Green to enrich coverage with more detailed and personal explanations (Unit 7, Section 7.4).
